BY USAMA MUBARAK

Poem By: Rishika Shukla

Once fear gripped the silent land,
Mountains stilled, rivers unmanned.
Shadows swallowed what stood bold,
And dawn seemed lost in darkness cold.

A boat adrift on restless tides,
No ground to hold, no stars to guide.
Storms raged wild, voices roared,
Confusion ruled, chaos soared.

But skies cleared as storms grew still,
Calm returned, rivers refilled.
Mountains rose, steady and tall,
Witnessing change through it all.

It wasn't the storm that shaped the ground,
But the quiet peace that wrapped around.
From fear and chaos, strength was born,
A brighter world, a hopeful dawn.
